

IN THE
FRONT ROWHEADLINERS TONIGHT.
Vaudeville.Hippodrome. Three Big Acts
Photoplays.
Nelson. Between Man and Beast
Dixie. Moral Courage
Princess. The Cigarette Girl

FOR the first time in the history of any of the National Parks, the United States Department of the Interior permitted a motion picture company to erect a set within the confines of Federal Reserves recently when the Geraldine Farrar-Artcraft players were granted this courtesy at the Yosemite National Park, Cal. Through the courtesy of Secretary of the Interior, Franklin Lane, Cecil B. DeMille, director of Miss Farrar's new photo production, "The Woman God Forgot," built an immense set in addition to taking scenes at the foot of the famous Yosemite Falls.

Many requests for this privilege have repeatedly been refused to film companies and while permits for the screening of views were issued, no scenes in which actors appeared or which required a set to be erected were allowed to be taken. The magnitude of the Farrar production and its historic features prompted the authorities to deviate from their strict rule in this instance.

Vaudeville and Fight Pictures.

The three excellent vaudeville acts at the Hippodrome will be augmented tonight by the showing of three interesting fight pictures. There will be stereopticon views of the Willard-Johnson championship mill at Havana and the Willard-Moran bout at Madison Square Garden. They will be minutely described so that even those who are not up on the fine points of the boxing game will readily understand why the "art of self defense" is so popular the world over. The most exciting part of the fight program will be furnished by a moving picture showing of the Kilbane-Chaney fight which was staged at Cedar Point, O., last Labor Day. These pictures were taken at the ring-side and show every detail of each round just as it happened in the roped arena.

The vaudeville program will not be curtailed in the least. The pictures will take the place of the regular picture features.

Jungle Story at Nelson.

The Nelson today features another of those intense jungle stories which have been the magnet for drawing extra large crowds to the previous showings in weeks past. This one is called "Between Man and Beast" and like its predecessors shows the living things of the African forests and tells a human interest tale in a dramatic manner. The scenes and the acting are on par with the excellency of the play, "The Ghost of the Desert," an American Girl short feature and a comedy called "Are Actors People" are added attractions showing today.

Gladys Huletta a Princess.

"The Cigarette Girl" at the Princess today, is perhaps not a great picture, but at least it is a fine picture, because in every department of its production exactly the right thing seems to have been done. Gladys Huletta, the featured member of the cast, has been given a real story. The role she assumes is exactly suited to her talents. The action moves swiftly, the scenes are placed so that the drama is constructive, and the climax is the only let-down of attention. The only serious fault is that William Parke, Jr., is miscast as the husband. His acting ability is as evident as in the other members of the cast, but he appears entirely too young.

"Moral Courage" at the Dixie.

Muriel Ostriche as the heroine in "Moral Courage" which is showing at the Dixie today, adds to that virtue a native shrewdness which is most astonishing in one so young. She appears at first as a simple enough lassie working in the factory of an old skinflint whose son promptly falls in love with her. When an unprincipled wretch in an attempt to discredit her with her admirer, lures her to a disreputable road-house, she transfers the knock-out drops from her cup to his and escapes by the window. Later, after she has married the young heir, his father offers her a hundred thousand dollars in cash to get a divorce; she promptly snaps up his offer, gets her divorce, pockets the money and then announces that she and her ex-husband are to be married again at once.

"CLOSE-UPS"

Glenn Arnett, who is back in the Dixie orchestra, reports having had a fine time while playing an orchestra engagement for several weeks at Chautauqua Lake, N. Y. While there he met Jack Lewis, who was playing in stock at Jamestown.

Maie Murray will make her first appearance as a Bluebird star during October appearing in Fred Myton's version of Louise Winter's magazine story, "The Princess Virtue," under direction of Robert Leonard. Her leading man will be Paul Nicholson, of excellent record on the dramatic stage who now appears for the first time in pictures.

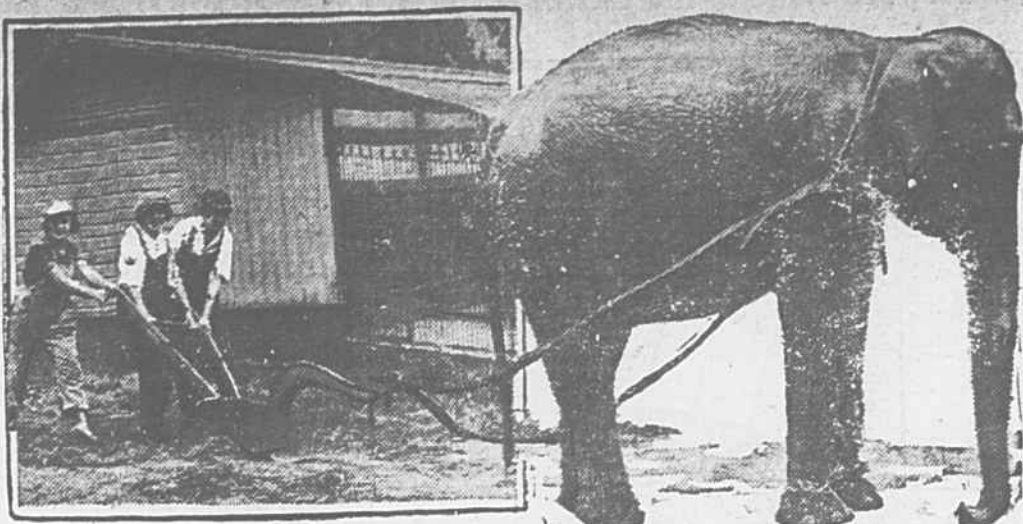

Violet Mesereau will make her next appearance as a Bluebird star in "The Girl by the Roadside," a screen version of Varick Vanard's novel of the same title, prepared by John C. Brownell and directed by Theodore Marston. Her leading man will be Cecil Owen. The work of production is nearing completion at Bluebird's Tonala (N. J.) Studios.

Y.W.D. GIRLS GIVE
JELLY TO SOLDIERSThree Hundred and Seventy Five Glasses Distributed At Camp Yesterday.

Three hundred and seventy-five glasses of home made jelly was presented yesterday to the boys at the First regiment camp by the Young Woman's department of the Y. M. C. A. The jelly was solicited from housewives of the city by members of the department detailed for the duty by Miss Grace Foster, secretary of the department. It was received gratefully by the soldier boys.

Last evening an informal meeting of the Advisory board of the department was held. Plans for the future were discussed but no definite date for the opening of the swimming pool was named. Inability to secure materials promptly and scarcity of labor have greatly hindered the work which is in such a state now that it is unwise to make any predictions.

Looks as if Sammy is carrying nothing but his rifle and cartridges, as he stands facing you. But turn him around, as below, and the same Sammy is carrying all his equipment in a compact case that has taken the place of the awkward blanket roll. It's neater and easier to carry.

SELF RELIANCE

now, what really would you say? The animal would speak his mind plainly at the time—he would bare his teeth, and lay back his ears. The animal is not polite.

"A man took some raccoons and gave them no food for three days. He then contrived a trap which had to be opened by four different processes requiring thought, and inside of it he placed food. He counted the number of seconds it took for the raccoon to get it open. He found that the female raccoon opened it quicker than the male—that is, she is instinct—you ask a woman why she does a thing and she will say 'because'—she does not know why. This thing was tried first on raccoons and then on primary grade children and on up to senior college men and women. It was also tried on the professional loafer, who gave it up easily, saying it wasn't worth while. Do you have professional loafers in this town? I never lived in a place where there were not charter members of the Spit and Argue club. It was found that animals learned more to Eve—pointing to a large animal with quickly than people of a low mental type.

"Let me give you some thinking questions,—why are you a teacher? Because you failed at millinery and barbering. Is this a watch I have in my hand? You will bet that it is? Well, it is not—it is a locket—I had the hands and face put on to mislead you—there are no works, just the picture of my sweetheart. You did not use your perceptions. Why do you use a thrashing machine on water melons? You don't know. Well, to get the seeds out of one corner of his mouth and spit the seeds out of the other.

"I have had my perceptions enlarged while here; I visited your bottle factory—I never knew there were so many bottles in the world. I'll give you a problem. If a man sold a horse for $200 and made 20 per cent. profit—what did the horse cost him? I'll give a life certificate to those that can answer it. It was given to the seniors in 400 class A high schools and only 32 per cent. got it."

Changing the subject, Dr. Jewell told the story of Adam and Eve who were walking out one evening. Said Adam: "It was found that animals learned more to Eve—pointing to a large animal with short legs and long neck and eyes in the back of the head—that is a giraffe. Eve walked all around the creature and shook her head and said: "there never was such an animal!"

He told of the boy who jumped up in his seat and said, "Teacher, teacher, teacher, Johnnie said putten where he should 'a put put."

Coming back to the serious again, he concluded with saying "I learned all my lessons all through school but I was in college before I learned to think. Teach your children to think and to act on their own judgment."

Instead of section meetings this morning, H. Francis James spoke on "Rural School Drawing." He gave a very interesting lecture.

Lunch was again served by the Y. W. C. A. girls of the High school.
